
IN THE NEWS

Catherine Connolly is Ireland's new left-leaning independent president-elect.

She won the country's presidential election in a landslide victory but the turn-out was low.

Although the Irish presidency is largely symbolic, her election reflects growing demands for social justice, inclusion, and a more activist leadership style.

De gauche / Orienté à gauche

President élu

Lors d'une victoire écrasante

Le taux de participation

Une / demandes croissante(s)/ grandissante(s)